Now Downtonâ€™s over (until Christmas, at least), letâ€™s take a look at how Julian Fellowes came up with the worldwide phenomenon, with the help of a forgotten writer from Lincolnshire. Written as recently as 1980, The Shooting Party by Isabel Colegate tells the story of 24 hours in the lives of members of the landed gentry and their servants before the outbreak of World War I.

My previous post was Nancy Mitford's "The Pursuit of Love", another story of the great country house, only "The Shooting Party" is set before the first world war, rather than the second. And whereas Mitford's novel was written a few years after the events, Colegate's novel is written from the distance of nearly seventy years.
